

Responding positively to sexual behaviours: the Traffic Lights Model

FPQ has developed a resource package of DVD and supporting material to provide a guide for professionals to IDENTIFY, ASSESS and RESPOND to sexual behaviours that may cause concern in school settings.

The 18-minute DVD presents a case study, based on real life scenarios about young people with a disability, to model staff and carer responses to sexual behaviours that may cause concern.

This resource uses a traffic lights concept outlining green, orange and red behaviours, to assist staff to distinguish between healthy behaviours and behaviours that may cause concern and to identify strategies to address these concerns.

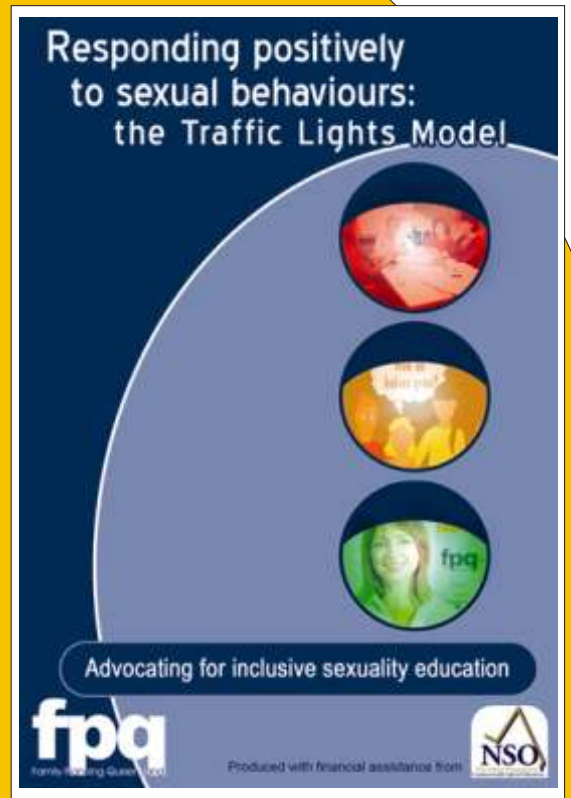

It can be used by a variety of professionals in a wide range of settings:

- as a supplementary training and behaviour management tool for professionals who have attended FPQ training
- as a resource to support and increase the knowledge of those who are geographically isolated and/or unable to attend a training program
  - as a tool for staff to use in their own in-service training with other colleagues
  - in educational and non-educational settings
  - on its own

$25 (including GST)

The package includes a DVD, a CD of support material and the Sexual behaviours in children and adolescents factsheet.

It is not suitable for viewing by children
