

The 9th of November, 2009 marked the inaugural launch of Australia's first national Sexual Health Week. The week, which ran from 9-15 November aimed at raising awareness of contraception use and STI prevention among Australian men and women of all ages and empowering them to take control of their sexual health.

Family Planning Queensland (FPQ) and Sexual Health & Family Planning ACT (SHFPACT) were official supporters of the week.

Thanks to our friends at Marie Stopes International for leading this national initiative.

FPQ looks forward to working with MSI www.sexualhealthweek.com.au, and SHFPACT www.shfpact.org.au in 2010.
